Weakened limbs hazardous

Ailing pine condemned over Norberg's objection

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

A TOWERING 70-year-old Monterey pine tree, diseased and believed likely to fall, has undergone the limb whittling necessary before it can be felled.

Situated on Dolores Street near the post office, the tree is being removed on orders from the Carmel City Council. It voted 4-1 on Feb. 8 to condemn the tree. The lone dissenter was Mayor Gunnar Norberg, who held out hope that the 100-foot-tall tree might recover.

Norberg's vote was cast despite warnings from the city forester and the Carmel Forestry Commission that the tree was dangerous. Reacting to the mayor's opinion, City Administrator Jack Collins turned to Norberg and said, "This is scary. You're talking about hurting somebody."

Limbs from the dying tree have fallen in the past, but claims for personal damages have not been filed, according to Collins. Councilman David Hughes, who favored removing the tree, joked, "I'm sure it was very exciting when the limbs fell, but I'm glad I wasn't under the tree at the time."

An injury or fatality caused by a falling branch could result in negligence claims against the city, City Attorney George Brehmer explained.

"Our record is on tape. We're not in any position to take chances," warned Councilman Bernard Anderson, who worried that if the city knowingly allowed the tree to stand, its negligence could be easily proven.

But Norberg insisted his duty as a councilman was to protect trees, which he refers to as Carmel's "top story."

THE MAYOR pointed to a section of a Jan. 5 letter from City Forester Gregory D'Ambrosio that said the entire tree was not likely to fall. The letter from D'Ambrosio did say, however, "I do feel that the remaining limbs could break Down she comes

A LIMB FROM high atop the towering but diseased Monterey pine comes crashing down. Workmen started felling the tree last week. The first step involves trimming off all the branches. Next, PG&E will topple the trunk that is above power lines. Later, city work crews will cut down the remainder of the tree. Roots have grown so deep, however, that workmen can only cut the trunk flush with the sidewalk. The street has been cordoned off while work is in progress. (George T. C. Smith photos)

Enjoys paper

Dear Editor:

My wife (formerly Joyce Uzzell) and I, having grown up in Carmel during the 1930s and early 1940s, are extremely interested in the memorabilia relating to Carmel, and particularly its photographic history. We were taken by the photograph from the Pat Hathaway collection on page 19 of the Feb. 2 issue of the Pine Cone, to which we subscribe.

We thoroughly enjoy keeping up with the weekly Carmel news through the Pine Cone, which we avidly read from cover to cover. Our interest in the Pine Cone and its news disseminating was reinstituted by dear friends and residents of Carmel, Mr. and Mrs. Hunter Bungay, formerly of Sacramento. Hunter is very active in community affairs and is one of the participating partners in Bruhn's Men's Store at Ocean and San Carlos.

Mother?

Dear Editor:

I question your headline "Salinas Mother to Oppose Supervisor Edwin Norris" (Pine Cone, Feb. 2). In reading the article, I find other possible titles: "Salinas Law Student . . .," "Salinas Law Clerk . . .," "Salinas Teacher . . ." or "Former League of Women Voters' President . . ." for example.

It seems to me that it is neither appropriate nor relevant to the article whether she is the mother of two children, noble and delightful though that may be. While it may be of interest to incorporate that information in the article, it is hardly headline material.

Would you, on the other hand, think the headline "Salinas Father to Oppose Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck" a bit odd?

Mr. Norris, while he may be a very fine father, does have other, more suitable qualifications. Grant Mrs. Shipnuck the same privilege. The article itself was informative and well-written. Pity about the headline.

Tree-mendous

Dear Editor:

Last Thursday, Feb. 9, at approximately 7 a.m. a Monterey pine fell across the corner of our house. The damage was not nearly as much as it could have been had the wind been blowing.

Through this letter, I would like to thank all of the very nice people who helped at this time.

First, the policeman who made the call for us that started the city rolling;

Next, the insurance man, Barney Belleci, who had crews here to start the repairs before the tree was removed;

Then the contractor who called Mr. Ben Compagno and crew, who made the repairs. They were very efficient, courteous and had the repairs finished before noon;

PG & E came and did their part, too. Our thanks to them;

Then the city road crews that removed the tree and debris. Before we knew it, it was finished. The City Forestry Department lent a hand, too.

Once again, our hats are off to everyone's help and hard work. We thank you one and all from the bottom of our hearts.

Editorial

Dear Editor:

Your editorial on the standards of education in Carmel schools was very interesting to me as a California native, just returned after 16 years in Yorkshire, England, where my children were born and educated and where I taught in public schools for four years.

While it is true that the basic 3Rs need to be thoroughly taught (and can be, in a variety of stimulating ways), there is an aspect of good education which always seems to get overlooked. We need to consider not only the school, the teachers and teaching methods, but also the children. Children who come to school with good habits of discipline and tidiness concentrate better and learn much more quickly. Children who have always been given their own way have no sense of security, and really do not know themselves well enough to be free to learn.

There are many things a child of 2 or 3 years has to get sorted out. The foundations of major attitudes are laid in these years. The basis of self-control and self-knowledge only come as the child is patiently disciplined, taught and loved in these early years. It is a full-time job, but it does pay off when school age is reached and each challenge at school is met successfully, whether it be academic or social.

There is one other point regarding the school and its curriculum. The idea of a wide curriculum, including far more than just the 3Rs, should not be thrown out in a swing back to basics. It is valuable and it is one way in which the Carmel system leads the way. Why not have the best of both worlds?

Mrs. Stevie Ashurst

Dear Editor:

Having just read your editorial (Pine Cone, Feb. 9) expressing deep concern for the effectiveness of the Carmel public schools and realizing that you have never visited River School, I would like to extend to you a cordial invitation to visit our school, collect any data, observe any program or classroom and talk to any personnel. You also are cordially invited to attend the meetings of the Parent Advisory School Site Council which is presently planning a complete assessment of all aspects of the school program.

If you are interested in any actual test score data, I will make a personal effort to obtain it for you.

One final note, you made a special point about the importance of the public attending to the selection process for the new superintendent and I want to say I absolutely agree. A most critical stage was passed last week at the school board meeting when the criteria for the new superintendent were presented. These board meetings are held on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month. Any effort you or your staff might expend in order to cover those meetings, especially those dealing with the selection of the new superintendent, would be greatly appreciated by your readers.

Pine knots

Steamrollered by Gunnar's majority

By AL EISNER

EVERY ONCE in a while, I feel as though I have stepped through the looking glass. The feeling swept over me Tuesday night when I carefully observed the five members of the Carmel City Council adopt the first reading of two ordinances over the reasoned objections of members of the City Council and Planning Commission as well as individuals who would be directly affected by the new laws.

One law would limit the size of building sites in the central business district to 8,000 square feet. The other establishes a new residential zone, R-4, and defines the uses that would be permitted in the zone.

Both were adopted by 3-2 votes, with Councilmen Bernard Anderson and David Hughes on the short end against Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen Helen Arnold and Mike Brown.

The casual observer might glibly comment that the by-now familiar split vote was a classic confrontation between those councilmen protecting the interests of the residents of Carmel and those who would further the interests of the business community.

It's not that easy and it's not that simple.

What I observed Tuesday night was something ugly and disquieting. Ugly because Mayor Norberg relentlessly used his privilege as chairman to dominate the proceedings in a very unfair manner. Disquieting because it became clear that the simplistic approach used by the "Norberg majority" on the council will, I believe, prove to be counter-productive and detrimental to the best interests of the residents of Carmel.

THE MAJORITY brushed aside remarks by Dr. Francis Herrick, a candidate for the council in the March 7 elections, who pointed out that the site limitation would reduce the amount of open space that larger projects presently require.

An attorney for commercial property owners who would be affected was surprised by the proposed law (he was at the meeting to speak to the R-4 ordinance). His polite suggestion that the affected property owners ought to be notified in person was ignored.

The real fireworks came, however, during the deliberations on the uses that would be permitted in the R-4 zone. Although no specific geographic boundaries were spelled out Tuesday, it was clear that the intent of the council and the Planning Commission was to rezone the C-2 District in the northeast portion of the city on Junipero Avenue between Third and Sixth Avenues.

Several speakers pointed out that drastic parking, setback and height limitations would make it virtually impossible to build moderate-priced residential apartment units.

Dr. Mel Kline, who owns property on Junipero, said that the details of the ordinance would make it impossible to accomplish its purpose, even though he shared the belief that apartments were the most feasible and best use for the property in that area.

Dr. Kline, who has nine apartments above shops on Mission near Fifth, said that eight of his tenants do not own cars. The requirement that one parking space be provided for each apartment unit was self-defeating, he said, because the price of the small efficiency apartments would rise sharply. Thus, only luxury apartments or expensive condominiums would be possible.

DURING THE COURSE of the discussion, it became apparent that the proposed ordinance was poorly worded and hastily drafted.

An embarrassed city planning director, Bob Griggs, stood mute when Councilman Anderson asked him: "Do you recommend that we pass this ordinance as is? We depend on you for expert advice. Should we pass it? Answer yes or no."

Councilman Hughes provided the answer: "Mr. Griggs would never submit anything as amateurish and unprofessional as this ordinance. The law is badly thought out and badly drawn. It should go back to the Planning Commission."

Dorothea Roberts, chairman of the Planning Commission, rose and suggested to the council that the ordinance needed more work. "Return it to the commission," she said. Planning Commissioner Robert Stephenson, who frequently disagrees with Mrs. Roberts, strode to the microphone and seconded the suggestion.

Councilman Brown, however, moved that the first reading of the ordinance be adopted, with the understanding that changes could be made before the second and final reading at the next council meeting. The motion was quickly seconded and approved by

Pro-residents majority on City Council passes multi-dwelling zoning

By BRUCE HOROVITZ

AN ORDINANCE establishing the first new residential zoning category in Carmel since 1929 will receive its second reading for adoption when the Carmel City Council meets on March 2. If adopted, the ordinance would become effective April 2.

This second and final reading comes five days before the March 7 City Council elections and is symbolic of the pro-residential ideology that has emerged in City Council actions in the past few years.

Backers of the new R-4 designation claim it will foster new multi-unit and low-cost housing in Carmel. Opponents call it hastily conceived and counterproductive to its own goals.

The City Council approved it in a first reading Tuesday with the same 3-2 vote by which the designation originally was adopted last week. Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen Helen Arnold and Mike Brown voted in favor of the proposal; Councilmen David Hughes and Bernard Anderson voted against it.

The zone will permit single-family dwellings, apartments and condominiums, and conditionally allow 25 types of businesses that ostensibly serve residents. These businesses, however, are subject to use permit control.

No specific area has been designated R-4 but the intent appears to be to apply it to the current C-2 limited commercial district on Junipero Avenue between Third and Sixth Avenues.

AT TUESDAY night's public hearing, four persons opposed the new zone. Planning Commissioner Robert Stephenson, who originally voted for the R-4 proposal, requested it be returned to the commission for further study. No one spoke in favor of the zone.

Melvin Kline, a property owner in the C-2 district, accused Norberg of running an "autocracy." He blasted the City Council for its "Band-Aid" approach to running Carmel. "Better a dozen Band-Aids than letting the patient bleed to death," retorted Mrs. Arnold.

Opponents hit heavily at specifics in the proposal. A one parking space requirement per apartment will prohibit small apartment growth, Kline said. The use permit requirement for the 25 conditional uses will present a financial hardship to businesses, noted former mayor Barney Laiolo.

"It's a carrot and stick proposal," said Brian Finegan, representing the Carmel Commercial Property Owners Association. He defined the carrot to be incentives for residential uses and the stick to be the commercial uses that are being taken away. "There is little carrot but lots of stick," he said.

The proposal requires that all underground parking be below sidewalk level. "That's the killer," Finegan said. The restriction would make the cost of providing underground parking too expensive, he said.

JOE McELDOWNEY, also a property owner in the C-2 zone, said the proposal gives developers no incentive to build. "I feel like a Christian tossed into the lion's den. The decision is already made," he said.

Norberg, Brown and Mrs. Arnold attempted to resolve among themselves the off at any time."

The forester did not attend the meeting, but later he explained that he recommended removing the tree more than a year ago.

The Forestry Commission rejected the recommendation at the time, "because it did not feel the tree presented sufficient danger," D'Ambrosio explained.

Two of the more dangerous branches hang over the street, Collins told the councilmen. Three separate locations on the upper trunk show signs of exterior rot, D'Ambrosio said. The tree probably has advanced rot in its interior heart wood, the primary structural support for the tree, the city forester added.

NORBERG ARGUED that the tree still had green limbs. He said the city had no business cutting down live trees.

"In my 38 years here, I have seen a number of trees, still green, which someone saw fit to cut down," Norberg said. "I'd greatly miss that tree."

Irked by Norberg's statements, Collins replied, "It is absolutely inevitable that tree will fall."

"Tall trees are a special part of this special place," Norberg rejoined. He said the City Council historically rejected removing trees "even remotely alive."

On a roll call vote, Councilmen Hughes, Anderson, Mike Brown and Helen Arnold voted to have the tree removed.

last week's City Council meeting would have eliminated one parking space.

Instead, the City Council voted 5-0 for the Forestry Commission to design landscaping. This will include a planter in the remaining tree stump and a "sprucing up" of the area adjacent to the town bulletin board.

How do you replace a 110-foot Monterey pine?

The Carmel City Council is not sure. The 70-year-old diseased tree was being removed from its location adjacent to the post office's Dolores St. side last week. The City Council has agreed to let the Carmel Forestry Commission design new landscaping to take the place of the tree.

Candidates warned on illegal campaign flyers

By JIM BARRETT

A BIT of law and order was restored Tuesday to the ensuing race for the Carmel City Council. No more political flyers with anonymous publishers will be allowed.

An assortment of campaign literature illegal under state political reform law had been circulated last week on behalf of all five candidates for the City Council.

Inquiries by the Pine Cone, however, led the city attorney to warn candidates about properly identifying the sender of partisan literature. In addition, the registrar of voters in Monterey County has sent copies of the statutes to Carmel and the eight other cities that have elections scheduled on March 7.

Apparently none of the candidates knew about the laws, partly because of a snafu at the registrar's office. The law on brochures changed midway through the filing period for Carmel candidates, but as a spokesman for the State Fair Political Practices Commission said, the statutes date back to the passage of Prop. 9 in 1974.

In Carmel, each candidate has published at least one leaflet or flyer that does not list the name and address of its sender. Under the State Elections Code, anonymous literature is punishable as a misdemeanor. "I don't intend to prosecute, though, because there would be little or no public benefit," City Attorney George W. Brehmer Jr. said Monday. Brehmer said, however, that he would advise the candidates to follow the law.

A LOT of people run these things off without getting legal advice, which is foolish. There is some responsibility on the part of the candidate to do that," said Russ Harlan, the assistant registrar of voters. None of the candidates were informed about the literature laws, according to Jack Collins, the Carmel city administrator. There are two laws that cover identification of campaign literature. One requires identification in mass mailings and was passed in 1974 as part of Prop. 9, the Fair Political Practices Act of 1974. The other applies to the Carmel literature and is contained in the Elections Code.

The statute on the Elections Code was amended in 1977 and the amendment took effect Jan. 1. The change liberalized the law somewhat. Previously, the candidate had to identify not only the sender and his address, but also the name and address of the person or firm that printed the brochure.

The identification laws are not new and have been enforced for over three years elsewhere, said John C. Greenwood, spokesman for the State Fair Political Practices Commission in Sacramento.

Harlan said the county registrar's office did not inform municipal candidates in Monterey County because the deadline for filing candidacy papers came before Jan. 1. In Carmel, however, the filing deadline was extended until Jan. 3.

"The city," Brehmer said apologetically, "relies very heavily on the county in conducting elections."

A FEW examples are shown here of the campaign literature that all candidates in the Carmel City Council race have circulated. Their content has not been challenged, but City Attorney George W. Brehmer Jr. has advised the candidates to properly identify the sender of the flyers. These did not.

New Carmel River dam backed by Zone 11 panel

By DIANE VALESKA

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Board of Supervisors has been urged to promote construction of a new dam on the Carmel River to boost the water-holding capacity on the Monterey Peninsula.

The recommendation, hoped to be a long-range answer to water shortages, came Monday from the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee, which formally approved a scaled-down version of a dam project suggested by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in a study released in May 1977. The committee vote was 7-2.

The dam preferred by the advisory committee would be large enough to yield from 19,000 to 21,000 acre-feet a year. According to Edwin Lee, a member of the committee, such a yield could be obtained from a dam with a holding capacity of 33,000 acre-feet.

The Corps of Engineers had proposed a dam capacity of 97,500 acre-feet, three times the size backed by the Zone 11 committee. Although the dam suggested by the Corps of Engineers is larger, its estimated annual yield for Peninsula water users would be only about 17,000 acre-feet per year, according to the 1977 study. Some water behind the dam would be saved to permit fish to reproduce. A total of 42,000 acre-feet would be used for flood control.

In the resolution passed to the supervisors, the Zone 11 committee suggested the new dam be built immediately downstream from the existing San Clemente dam. San Clemente can hold 1,500 acre-feet. Water backed up by the new dam would flood San Clemente.

THE TIME HAS come to advise the community of the direction we will go for more water supply," said Lee, who proposed the resolution calling for the new dam.

Lee estimated the cost for the dam would be $44.8 million based on 1976 figures. "If we go ahead with flood control facilities, it is possible to apply for federal funding to pay for a portion of the dam cost. If, however, a single-purpose dam for water storage is approved, we would not be eligible for federal aid," he said.

"We owe the community a recommendation to show where this district is going and the costs," he added. "My recommendation is that we build a dam. Projected costs are increasing $1 million a month for a project that will supply our water needs."

Financing for the dam would require a voter-approved bond issue. An agreement with the California-American Water Co. regarding operations and inclusion into its water system also would be required.

"If we are going to build, we should decide soon and offer the recommendation to the public," Lee told the committee.

"The water stored in that dam and the water stored in the Carmel Valley alluvial aquifer should be used conjunctively to maximize utilization of the total runoff of the watershed," he said.

Voting against the resolution were committee members John Williams and Mel Vercoe. "We don't have a good idea of the physical resources of the Carmel aquifer available," said Williams.

"We need a metering analysis and computer simulation model to be given an assumption on how the aquifer would behave," Williams said. "The evidence is that we don't need a dam for the present population. Recommending a dam is a population assumption."

"It is the responsibility of the committee not to retard growth but to provide water at the lowest possible cost to the people who are here and to allow for natural growth," argued Nick Lombardo, a new member on the committee. He voted for the resolution.

Vercoe said, "It has now been generally accepted that the solution lies in a new dam on the Carmel River."

"The basic order of approach should be to first take a public opinion survey to determine whether money, via voter approval, will actually be available for this purpose, if and when the time comes to use it," Vercoe said.

"Next there should be an ironclad agreement with American Water Works and Cal-Am regarding all the legalities, technicalities and money considerations pertinent to joint operation of a public-financed dam on Cal-Am property," he said.

Vercoe said only after studies and surveys are complete could he support a dam project.

CALIFORNIA REQUIREMENTS that compel dam owners to accommodate fish populations from the Carmel River were criticized during discussion.

"I'll fight for no storage water for fish," said Lee. "I oppose providing water flow for the Department of Fish and Game."

According to state Fish and Game codes, owners of any dam must provide a means to allow fish to reproduce — by building either fish ladders or a hatchery.

The Corps of Engineers study recommended use of a fish hatchery, and its plan provided for additional water storage during the spawning seasons.

"I think we need to hire an expert to see if we can treat fish as if they were humans," said Lee. "If there is water, we'll spill. If there is no water, we won't."

Lee's statement was condemned by Rich Hughett, conservation chairman of the Steelhead Association, on Tuesday.

In a telephone conversation, Hughett said the association "would definitely push for a hatchery and additional water storage with the backing of the law and the Fish and Game Department."

The San Clemente dam, owned by Cal-Am, was constructed before the Fish and Game code came into effect; thus the requirements do not apply at the dam.

Cal-Am reports aquifer 'recovered'

Recharge levels at four test wells have shown the Carmel Valley aquifer is "fully recovered" in the vicinity of the Mid-Valley Shopping Center.

This statement was issued by Richard Sullivan, vice president of the California-American Water Co., Monday during a meeting of the Zone 11 Water Advisory Committee in Monterey.

"Rain it has," said Sullivan. "Rainfall at the Los Padres dam site since July 1 has amounted to 32.84 inches. The average rainfall for that location is 17.33 inches, based on records dating back to 1921."

The Berwick well, one of the four monitored by Cal-Am during the drought, showed a 38-foot recovery from last year's water levels — which amounts to 18 inches above normal, he said.

Two of the remaining wells recorded 14-foot recharges and the fourth recorded a 17-foot recovery.

Water consumption since the return to voluntary water rationing on Jan. 25 is still far below that used last year under voluntary rationing, reported Sullivan.

"Consumption is down 38 per cent over the period from Jan. 25 to Feb. 11, 1977," said Sullivan. "In 1977, 32.92 acre-feet were consumed during a 17-day period. In the 17 days since an end to rationing, consumption was 20.44 acre-feet."

Woman gets probation for attempted murder

A 19-year-old Monterey Peninsula College student from Carmel Tuesday was put on probation for four years by a Monterey Superior Court judge for the attempted murder of another Carmel resident in October.

The sentence given to Pamela Ann Cox, of Viscaing Road and Flanders Drive, included one year on a work furlough program at the county jail. Judge Harkjoon Paik handed down the sentence. The program allows Miss Cox to work days, but she must return to the county jail evenings.

Miss Cox pleaded not guilty to an attempted murder charge in Monterey Municipal Court on Nov. 1. She changed her plea to guilty on Dec. 30 in Superior Court.

She admitted grinding up 30 Valium pills and placing them in a milkshake that her intended victim, Patricia Seablom, 33, drank on Oct. 29. The pills did no harm, but made her extremely drowsy, according to Dean Flippo, of the district attorney's office.

Miss Cox then attempted to suffocate the victim with a pillow until she was apprehended by friends of Mrs. Seablom, Flippo said. Mrs. Seablom resides on Santa Rita street. Flippo cited no motive for the attack.

Marriott ready for use permit

NO HEARING date for its use permit application has been scheduled, but that is the next hurdle for developers of the proposed 376-room Rancho Canada Marriott Lodge at the mouth of the Carmel Valley.

Final certification of the required environmental impact report on the proposed golf and tennis spa was narrowly approved Tuesday by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors. The vote was 3-2. It certifies the report is complete in terms of legal requirements to divulge and propose ways to remedy environmental damage.

"We are not determining the issue of project approval," said Supervisor Michal Moore of Monterey. "This document is to be used to determine whether the proposed lodge will be consistent with the General Plan and its environmental impact."

Opposition to the certification came from Supervisors Sam Farr of Carmel and Dusan Petrovic of King City.

"I cannot vote against the people and bring anxiety to the residents of the Carmel Valley," said Petrovic. "It is obvious this project could not be completed for several years and I see no rush to approve an EIR for it."

"It is difficult to separate an EIR from the project it is supposed to serve," Petrovic continued. "The area the project is planned for is the most sensitive area in Monterey County. No EIR can be detailed enough to touch all the issues."

County Counsel William Stoffers cautioned the board to determine only the issue of whether the EIR was legally complete.

Farr opposed certification on the basis that "alternatives were not adequately explored. There are two prevailing areas — water studies and seismicity. In this document, there is no analysis of the liquefaction zone of faults located near the project."

NICK LOMBARDO, owner of the Marriott lodge site, talking about the vote, said he was "pleased three supervisors had a responsibility to the law."

Verbal testimony on the issue was closed on Jan. 31, but letters were accepted until Feb. 6 by the County Planning Department. There were 19 and they were included in the EIR.

Because of issues raised in the most recent letters, three mitigation measures to the document were added by county planners. They provided for:

- A riding and hiking trail easement to be deeded to the county, with the location to be determined by the Planning Commission or the Board of Supervisors;

- A licensed geologist, experienced in seismic hazards, to provide a safe building design in order to address seismic considerations at the project site; and

- Conditions for a sewage treatment plant in the event a hookup to the Carmel Sanitary District is not available.

Certification of the EIR was required before the planning commissioners could conduct hearings for a special use permit for the project. The application for the permit was filed in December 1976.

A hearing date has not yet been placed on a Planning Commission agenda.

Lid on shop sizes approved

ALLOWABLE building site sizes in the Carmel commercial C-1-C district could be halved if a new ordinance is approved at its second reading before the City Council on March 2.

The City Council voted 3-2

Tuesday to approve the first reading of an ordinance that will limit C-1-C building sites to 8,000 square feet. The current limit is 16,000 square feet.

Mayor Gunnar Norberg and Councilmen Mike Brown and Helen Arnold voted for the restriction. Councilmen Bernard Anderson and David Hughes did not.

Norberg said the ordinance will prevent future structures like the Carmel Plaza. Hughes contended that it will result in more building density.

"The smaller site size will offer a challenge for designing buildings closer to the village character," Mrs. Arnold claimed.

"I'm surprised Mrs. Arnold and the mayor are in favor of denser building," commented Hughes. Hughes predicted that the proposed restrictions will backfire and eliminate the open space required under the current size restriction. He also said large developments would merely erect several small and freestanding buildings to bypass the law.

The mayor labeled it a "judgment" call. "It is more important to reduce the maximum site size. This will put us in a better position to deal with outside chains," Norberg said.

THE McFARLAND Center, Mission and Sixth, and the Paseo San Carlos Building, Ocean and Seventh, both are developed on 8,000-square-foot sites, Arnold noted. "To my taste, that is quite large enough," she said.

"I thought we could live with the 16,000-square-foot limit. I'm reluctant to pass this," said Anderson.

"At first, the limitations seemed too small to me," replied Brown, "but this will preserve the heart of our business district."

Eleven blocks in the central commercial district would be affected. The average building site size in the district is 5,035 square feet, according to a September report from the planning director. The report notes that only eight of the zone's current 85 parcels are larger than 8,000 square feet.

The eight parcels would become nonconforming uses under the proposed ordinance. Hughes said if the Pine Inn were to burn down, under the proposed 8,000-square-foot limitation it could not be rebuilt.

DR. FRANCIS Herrick, a City Council candidate, called the proposed ordinance, "an invitation to gerrymandering."

Former mayor Barney Laiolo said if the Carmel Plaza had been built under the proposed limitations, it simply would have divided itself into 76 separate stores. "There would be very little room for landscaping," he added.

Garbage fee hiked 55 cents by council

The Carmel City Council and the city's franchised refuse-collection firm agreed Tuesday on a 55-cent per month garbage fee hike. The City Council vote was 5-0.

The John Roscelli Corp. requested a $1.25 per month hike in January. The increase will raise garbage collection rates to $3.80 per month. Residential customers presently pay $3.25 a month.

The increased rates, however, will include an additional service requested by Councilman Mike Brown. During one week in every year, the company will set up four large collection bins for residents to dump oversized refuse too big for their own cans.

Locations for the bins and collection dates will be determined by the firm, City Administrator Jack Collins and Public Works Superintendent Bill Askew.

"This was tried in the past and it didn't work," Askew said, referring to the once-a-year free dumping plan. He said residents continued to deposit garbage in the selected areas even after the collection bins were removed.

The R-4 controversy

problems noted by the proposal's opponents.

"This is getting ridiculous," Anderson said, interrupting their discussion. "We're trying to rewrite everything."

Anderson asked Planning Director Robert Griggs for his opinion of the R-4 proposal. City Administrator Jack Collins said the question was unfair because Griggs did not write the proposal. "Mr. Griggs would never submit anything as unprofessional and amateurish as this," remarked Hughes. Hughes said the proposal was filled with "resplendent confusion."

WE COULD GO on indefinitely picking it to pieces," countered Norberg. He said the overriding issue is to emphasize Carmel's residential character. "The purpose of the community is not for each business to extract the last dollar out of the land," the mayor declared.

Hughes moved for referring the proposal back to the Planning Commission. Following a second to the motion by Anderson, Norberg called for a substitute motion for approval as a first reading. Although the substitute motion was offered by Brown, the city administrator and city attorney said a vote on the original motion was in order. The Hughes motion failed 3-2. Norberg, Brown and Mrs. Arnold composed the majority.

Brown moved again for first reading of the proposal and Mrs. Arnold seconded his motion.

"There is no reason for more discussion. You have your group going," Hughes replied, before voting against the proposal.

Dear Editor:

One of the first people whom I met upon moving to Carmel two years ago was Howard Brunn. I knew that this was a man of vitality and conviction as well as being extremely hospitable and friendly in making my husband and me welcome in Carmel. I would like to take this opportunity to publicly state my endorsement of Howard Brunn for City Council. His optimism, fairness and attention to Village happenings will be strengths greatly needed on our City Council.

Mary Wagner
Carmel

Dear Editor:

The election of Francis Herrick and Dorothea Roberts to the Carmel City Council on March 7 will serve to restore the maturity and direction which that municipal body so clearly needs.

Since his appointment as representative to the City Council by the Carmel Citizens Committee four years ago, Francis Herrick has attended more City Council and Planning Commission meetings than any other Carmel resident. As president of the Citizens Committee for two terms, he has made countless presentations to each body, submitting position papers on important local issues and offering always constructive suggestions regarding topics under study. The depth of Francis Herrick's understanding of matters currently being considered by the City Council is unsurpassed. His ability to provide sound guidance, wisdom and direction is well known to those who have heard him speak from the Council podium.

Despite labels which others have recently seen fit to hang upon themselves, Dorothea Roberts truly is "old Carmel." A resident of our community for the past 55 years and the mother of three Carmel-raised children, she also has been a successful local businesswoman for the past 16 years. A member of the Planning Commission for 12 of those years, she is presently serving her second term as chairman of that important body. Dorothea Roberts' long-time residency and active community participation, coupled with her close working knowledge of vital planning and zoning processes that are essential to our city's defense against outside economic interests, make her an ideal selection for City Council.

This year, through the elective process, Carmel voters have the opportunity to bring responsible majority government back to our community. Because we need their combined experience, judgment and dedication at this crucial time in Carmel's history, I urge you to vote for Francis Herrick and Dorothea Roberts for City Council on March 7.

Eugene R. Hammond
Carmel

Dear Editor:

A few days ago, I was handed an invitation to attend an election beach party. The caption read, "This is Your Town—Start Running It." Actions of the City Council during the last 18 months have indeed been disappointing. Previous City Councils listened to citizens and functioned in accordance with the desires of the majority of the residents. That is not true of the present council.

Just a few of the constructive accomplishments of previous City Councils that can be pointed to with pride are:

- The purchase of the Flanders and Doolittle properties providing 35 acres of greenbelt.
- Acquisition and reconstruction of the Boy Scout House.
- Addition of a first-line fire engine to keep our fire insurance rates down.
- Acquisition of the Ranger High Rise that enables the Forestry Department to care properly for our mature Monterey pines with safety to employees.

• Leadership in the establishment, with other Peninsula cities, of the Monterey Peninsula Transit to furnish improved bus service to Carmel, including rest benches in our city.

All of the above were done without useless and self-destructing confrontations. Lately, there have been too many impractical issues raised, and the endless rhetoric and jawboning by certain members of the present City Council have only antagonized our citizens and accomplished nothing. I agree we do need a change of members in the council. Since the Old Carmel group believes the same, why does it wish to return two of the incumbents to the council?

During my eight years as an elected official, I endeavored to represent the best interests of all the citizens. We need that approach by all members of city government. In my contacts with you, I have had the opportunity to know the individuals who have devoted their time and efforts to their civic responsibilities and who are doing their best to keep the Carmel we all value from being swept away.

Because their qualities of good judgment, balance and fairness have been demonstrated in the past, I am voting for Dr. Francis Herrick, former chairman of the Carmel Citizens Committee, and Mrs. Dorothea Roberts, chairman of the Planning Commission. I believe that in their many years of service to the community, they have demonstrated they will deal with future civic affairs in the same effective conscientious manner they have already shown.

We have had enough of self-serving bickering. A city should not be run by slogans. City government needs mature, practical, balanced city officials to deal with complicated and important problems.

Bernard A. Anderson
City Councilman
Carmel

Dear Editor:

The Carmel City Council election will be held March 7 and as chairman of Old Carmel, I am giving our and my support to Helen Arnold and Mike Brown, who have, in their different ways, along with Mayor Norberg, shown their concern for us who actually live in Carmel as residents and citizens. I also wish to give our and my support to Howard Brunn. In fact, this letter is mainly to express my personal support for Howard. The last time I endorsed him for office, we were both at Carmel High School, where he was elected student body president.

Since then, he has done a lot of things that candidates for public office have done that demonstrate qualities of leadership. He won the Distinguished Flying Cross in World War II, but this shouldn't turn the younger voters off — Howard was in one of those Catch-22 squadrons flying out of Corsica. He was a B-25 pilot and got stuck for 70 missions before getting home. He is a past president of the Carmel Business Association. He is on the board of directors of Talbott Ties and the Monterey Jazz Festival and was a leader in the OLAF organization, which saved the ocean-side of Highway 1, south of the Carmel River to Carmel Meadows, from becoming a commercial-residential development. He has started many successful businesses in Carmel (and other towns, as well), and he is presently a partner and owner of the Carmel Bay Company, a very successful retail operation.

You might think that a successful businessman would have more regard for the business community than the community as a whole, but you must remember that Howard grew up here and those of us who were fortunate enough to have grown up here remember how good Carmel was to us. We were judged by what we were, not what we had. Some of the summer visitors we knew in those days (tourists if you like) are still our friends.

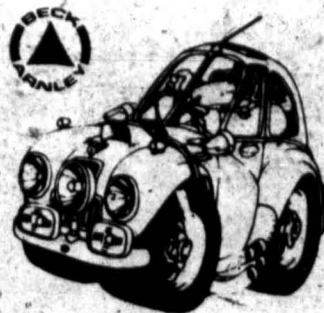

Howard and I know that we can never recapture those days (and who needs the Great Depression, anyway), but one of the many good things then was the way that the 2,000 residents of those days pretty well pulled together for the good of all of us. I think it's Howard's strong memories of the past, of knowing how good Carmel was and still can be, that sparked him and several other long-time residents to try to "save the Village Corner" a year ago last September, and try to keep at least part of the business district serving the residents. We're both members of the business community and we don't underrate its importance, but it must serve the interests of the residents as well as the business owners.

Howard's philosophy on Carmel is in part, "Carmel was good to me — now it's my duty to do something for Carmel." I think Howard will truly represent all of Carmel's 5,000 population and he may very well be a liaison between the business community and the community as a whole. He has demonstrated an ability in business and is a leader in the town. To some he may seem a maverick, but then I think that when Carmel is at its best, it has mavericks as residents and on the City Council.

Editorial: It is a 'Norberg Majority'

Arnold and Norberg.

At the Feb. 6 meeting of the council, City Administrator Jack Collins said the law "may be around for 30 years. I find it very appropriate that it be sent back."

"I find it inappropriate to have it sent back," shot back Norberg. Arnold and Brown agreed and the ordinance moved ahead.

WHY ALL THIS unseemly haste? Why should the "Norberg majority" ride roughshod over members of its own Planning Commission and act so rudely to its colleagues on the council? Is it because it wants to push through as much restrictive legislation as possible before the March 7 election?

I shudder to think that three mature adults would ram through controversial legislation that would affect the future of Carmel for such mean reasons. The ruthlessness of the steamroller Tuesday night, however, made such thoughts return again and again.

THE MOST disturbing part of what I witnessed, however, was the dictatorial and unfair conduct of the meeting by Norberg. He took advantage of his rank to comment at length whenever he wished on any aspect of the question. Councilmen asked questions and hurled charges at each other, conversed with members of the audience and openly murmured their discontent. It was unruly and disorderly.

ONE FURTHER observation: I'm beginning to think that the "Norberg majority" on the council is not as much "pro-resident" as "anti-business." Mrs. Arnold, before casting her "aye" vote, launched into a bitter diatribe against the Carmel tourist industry. It was an incredible tirade. Norberg, for his part, asserted: "The purpose of the community is not to allow the property owner to extract the last dollar from the land . . . he will fit into what is required."

That's demagoguery. His opponents were not trying to figure out how to maximize profits for property owners. They were attempting to find a reasonable way to reach mutually agreed-upon goals. Adopting oversimplified, half-baked ordinances won't help.

CARMEL NEEDS DOROTHEA ROBERTS ON THE CITY COUNCIL

EXPERIENCE

Dorothea Roberts has served on the Planning Commission for nearly 12 years. She is now in her second term as Chairman. No candidate better understands the complex problems which are creating divisive factions and no candidate is better qualified to resolve them in the best interests of the entire community.

BACKGROUND

Dorothea Roberts has lived in Carmel for 55 years. She attended Sunset School and Hartnell College. She has been married to Ken Roberts for 36 years and in the course of raising three children has been involved in P.T.A., Cub Scouting and Red Cross activity. She belongs to the Carmel Art Association and Society for Western Art. Her first one-man show was at the old Town House of the Carmel Foundation. She has conducted her own business in Carmel both as long-term resident and successful businesswoman and can be entirely objective about the rights and responsibilities of each.

JUDGMENT

Dorothea Roberts will bring to the City Council the kind of practical common sense that will stress harmony, more prudent spending of taxpayer money and prompt attention to the many pressing matters that have been neglected. She will contribute to greater dignity and decorum of council sessions and offer a special sensitivity to the needs of residents of older years and more modest income.

Tourist crush hits hard in Hawaiian wine cellars

By ROBERT LAWRENCE BALZER

HONOLULU—The growth of tourism in Hawaii, presently reaching a staggering 3.4 million visitors a year, is creating some problems and political issues. But where wining and dining is concerned, everything is better and better. There is even an overflow of gastronomic excellence to the popular satellite islands of Kauai, Maui and the big island of Hawaii.

The new Coconut Palace of the Coco Palms on Kauai, under the aegis of "Lady of Chateau and Estates Wines Co. The representatives of Robert Mondavi of Oakville and Mirassou of San Jose also were on the island, beat attempting to discover which good red and white wines and sparklers could be put onto wine lists with a chance of continuity, the situation in the French market being what it is for the coming months and year — nothing but up, up, up and out of sight.

Fournier presented the Alsatian white wines of Trimbach, and has evidently convinced George and Hubert Trimbach of Ribeauville that they should release a couple thousand cases of their sensational Muscat d'Alsace for the American market. It should presently be available in all the leading metropolitan areas. But don't think of it in terms of skid row Muscat wines. This dry but opulent version of the grape has a regal quality somewhat reminiscent of a fine Montrachet, plus, of course, the singular and penetrating bouquet, a fragrance which once upon a time caught the fancy of Omar Khayyam.

The Sebastiani Vineyard of Sonoma is very well known for its Barbera editions, a rich and berrylike Zinfandel, some fine, well-aged Angelica and Sherry, but the fame and honors for Chenin Blanc, led off years ago by Charles Krug, who established a vogue for the wine, did not dominate their lists. A present release of a 1976 North Coast Counties Chenin Blanc at a modest price will bring many new friends into the Sebastiani folds. It's thirst quenching, only slightly sweet, long and silky in the mouth.

AMONG THE PRIZES in white wines available here in the islands, and in leading wine shops on the mainland, is the Simi 1975 Alexander Valley Gewurztraminer. The wine in those tall slender bottles was made by Mary Ann Graf, with the watchful eye of Andre Tchelistcheff. "Watchful eye" is neither exaggeration nor mere figure of speech. As the grapes approach the time of harvest, the winemaker almost sleeps in the vineyard, checking sugar content. Too low and the wine is bland and almost bitter. Too ripe and the acid drops and the wine lacks brilliance in taste nuance. But at just the right ratio of sugar to acid, those pink-skinned grapes produce an irresistible appeal. Whenever you serve it, be sure to have more than one bottle chilled and ready. This Simi vintage of current distribution, to be enjoyed now, is a superb aperitif wine and can continue on to the dining table to complement roast chicken or baked ham.

These were some of the highlights among the wines brought across the Pacific to enchant the tourists. Diamond Head is gray from a serious drought. There has been almost no rainfall this winter, but to us haoles the place never looked better, and certainly there's no danger of any "drought" in the wine cellars.

Grace" Guslander, has award-winning chef Clarence Nishii creating provocative dishes of indigenous flair.

On the biggest "Orchid Isle," Hawaii, United Airlines recently has acquired the Mauna Kea Beach Hotel, but manager Robert Butterfield is staying on and food and beverage manager Adi Kohler's spectacular and world-famous luncheon buffet goes right on drawing daily crowds to the Cafe Terrace.

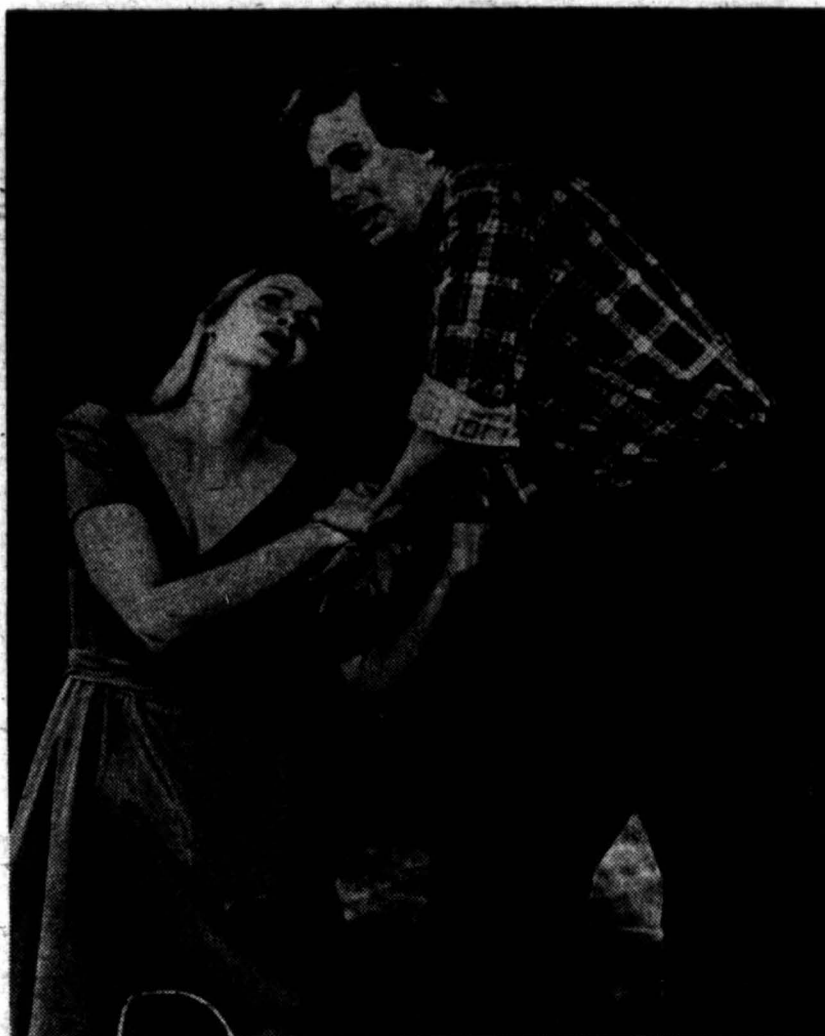

On the island of Maui, which is experiencing perhaps the most prodigious tourist bonanza, Hungarian-born George Battha — who directs the multimillion-dollar food and beverage wonderland of the Amfac Island Holidays Resorts — has a crew of young Dutch, German and Swiss professionals for the eight restaurants of the Royal Lahaina.

On Oahu, while it is common to hear Waikiki put down as an overdone resort, Honolulu remains a worthy tourist magnet. There may be the jumble of bazaars along Kalakaua Avenue, but there also are a half dozen restaurants and even more hostleries which are earning stellar ranking in the hospitality services of this big American industry. In a gourmet ranking of the top 10 American cities today, I personally would put Honolulu among the front-runners along with New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, New Orleans and Washington, D.C. Of course, there's still fish and poi and roast pig from the imu pits for everyone's delight at the indigenous luau. But to dine at Bagwell's 2424 of the Hyatt Regency Waikiki, or at Canlis, or the Maile Room of the Kahala Hilton, or Michel's at the Colony Surf, the Third Floor of the Hawaiian Regent Hotel, or the Top of the I at the Ilikai will match the haute cuisine of three-star restaurants of France in consistent performance. It was not always so. It has become so because the market opened for it. And it's here 12 months a year.

ALL OF WHICH places some strain upon available wine supplies. This subject was being brought into focus during two wine-tasting luncheons with the visits of Don Sebastiani of Sonoma and Andre Fournier

Visiting opera composer tells rigors of writing

By SCOTT MacCLELLAND

NOW THAT you have decided your masterpiece will be an opera, some thoughts from Joyce Barthelson might be most useful. Joyce Barthelson has just found success with her fifth opera, The Devil's Disciple, in White Plains, N.Y. In the New York Times, critic Joseph Horowitz wrote, "Miss Barthelson's lyric gift is the genuine article. The duets . . . are quite wonderful — melodious and warmly orchestrated in the modern-Romantic vein of, say, Samuel Barber." He continued, "Miss Barthelson has managed to stitch his sixth wife, Catherine Parr.

The Devil's Disciple, based on Shaw's play set in revolutionary America, was begun in 1974. Miss Barthelson had hoped to complete the work in time for the bicentennial, but interruptions and the time it took for the composer to write her own libretto (as she always does) made that impossible.

When it finally had its premiere in November, the conductor was Antonia Brico, a classmate of Joyce Barthelson, and another recent house guest of Virginia and Reginald Greenberg. Miss Barthelson was, naturally, delighted with the New York Times review. In describing the music, she said, "I really wanted to bridge the gap between traditional opera and the American musical stage. The connecting interludes can be dissonant and very dramatic, but I tried awfully hard to make the songs something everybody can enjoy. I know they're supposed to be arias in an opera, but in America I call them songs and they have to be in our good American idiom."

I asked if the music is basically tonal. "Oh, of course. Tonal, but not dreadfully tonal."

Until the time comes when we can enjoy a Barthelson production, I took the liberty to ask her several questions about "stage business."

She obliged, and described the process of writing the libretto, the piano score and the full score. Before the work could be delivered to the publisher, all the individual parts had to be copied. Commenting on a book she had just read, she noted the problems Mozart suffered with this sticky business of copying. Fortunately, Miss Barthelson was able to secure the services of a copyist who has a splendid reputation for accuracy. "Of course," she added, "it didn't cost as much in Mozart's day." The prepublication cost of copying The Devil's Disciple was more than $5,000. Think about that before you pursue your full-length opera.

Music Corner

everything together so cleverly that the fabric is virtually seamless."

But who is Joyce Barthelson, and how does a White Plains opera production relate to Carmel?

To deal with the question's first part, composer and music educator Joyce Barthelson was a recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Greenberg of Carmel. Virginia Hoff Greenberg and Miss Barthelson founded the Hoff-Barthelson Music School in Scarsdale, N.Y., in 1944. For Miss Barthelson, the visit with her old friend and colleague was a welcome respite after the enormous demands of mounting the premiere of Devil's Disciple last November.

Miss Barthelson's presence in California recently has been as a visitor catching her breath. But, in the early days of radio, she was a well-known resident of the San Francisco Bay Area, participating with Margaret Rowell and Frances Wiener in the Arion Trio. It was radio that expanded the reputation of the trio. For a time, the Arion was engaged for almost daily live broadcasts.

UNTIL JUST a few years ago, Miss Barthelson and Mrs. Greenberg were consumed with the responsibilities of their highly successful music school. Upon semi-retirement from the school, Miss Barthelson suddenly found herself caught up in the new career of opera composer. What clinched it was winning first prize in a contest organized in New York by the National Federation of Music Clubs and ASCAP. Chanticleer, based on Chaucer, was the prize-winning work, and it took its place with the Christmas opera Feathertop, based on Hawthorne, and the composer's most often produced The King's Breakfast, a short comedy about King Henry VIII and

AS FOR the production itself, sponsored by the Hoff-Barthelson School, the total figure came to almost $30,000. Miss Barthelson was exceedingly grateful to the several "angels" who made it possible. She added that some of the expense was recovered by ticket sales to the well-publicized premiere.

The visit with an opera composer on holiday in Carmel was delightful and illuminating.

Retirement? Joyce Barthelson doesn't even think about that. But the new career? "I love it," she declared. "Opera is my thing."

Pirated recipe for jambalaya

By PHYLLIS JERVEY

On chilly, blustery nights like we have been having lately, I like to cook up some satisfying soup stews. Eaten in front of a glowing fireplace, nothing could be more warming than a bowl of hearty Louisiana Jambalaya.

During Mardi Gras, this salubrious stew is simmered all day and served with the belief it will ward off colds and flu. Steaming hot rice is served separately.

Rice grown before modern irrigation was used is called "Providence Rice" because its growth depended on favorable weather. Rice plantations date from 1718 in Louisiana but it was not until after the Civil War that the state's rice culture became the surely providential success it is now. While the low country of South Carolina was the birthplace of rice in the U.S., the initial prosperity declined after the War between the States.

Here is how jambalaya was served to me by Germinie McNeese, a native of Louisiana:

Louisiana Jambalaya

To serve six, first heat a small amount of fresh bacon fat in the bottom of a lightly oiled Dutch oven. Add 1/2 cup chopped onions, browning lightly, and sprinkle with flour through a fine mesh. Add 1 pound raw ham cut into small squares and skinned little link sausages. This is a refined way to add sausages. Out in the bayou, dumping in a big hunk of homemade saucisson is the accepted way. Washed, shelled and cleaned raw jumbo shrimp are next. Flavor with red pepper, salt and mashed garlic. The all-important okra is never forgotten.

A simple salad made at the table with Germinie's distinctive dressing is all that needs to be added, although toasted garlic bread is what makes this Cajun feast special. The high raucousness of this potent dish is reminiscent of the derring-do of that dashing French buccaneer Jean Lafitte who operated in the Gulf of Mexico.

Perhaps you would rather make:

Springtime Eggplant Custard

Cut two large eggplants in half. Scrape out the interiors leaving the skins intact. Make up a custard, sweetening it a bit, then adding crushed fresh or dehydrated rosemary and thyme. Keep in refrigerator until ready to serve, then pop into oven until fluffy.

Finish off with:

Jellied Wine Compote

Drain 1 pound each of canned pear halves, cling peach halves, pineapple chunks. Reserve the juices. Arrange drained canned fruits in shallow serving dish. Combine fruit juices with enough water to make 2 cups. Heat to a boil and simmer for five minutes. Add cloves, cinnamon and lemon slices to taste. Dissolve 1 package of strawberry Jello. Add lemon juice and 1 cup Tokay wine. Chill until well set.

A DELIGHTFUL CHILD inspecting a field of pansies is one of the paintings by Helen Caswell included in her fifth annual one-woman show at Miner's Gallery Americana, Sixth and Lincoln, Carmel.

Sierra Club schedules weekend hikes

Hikes along Old Sur Road and in Garland Ranch Park are on the outing calendar of the local Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club for this weekend. Members of other chapters and interested nonmembers are welcome to join the excursions.

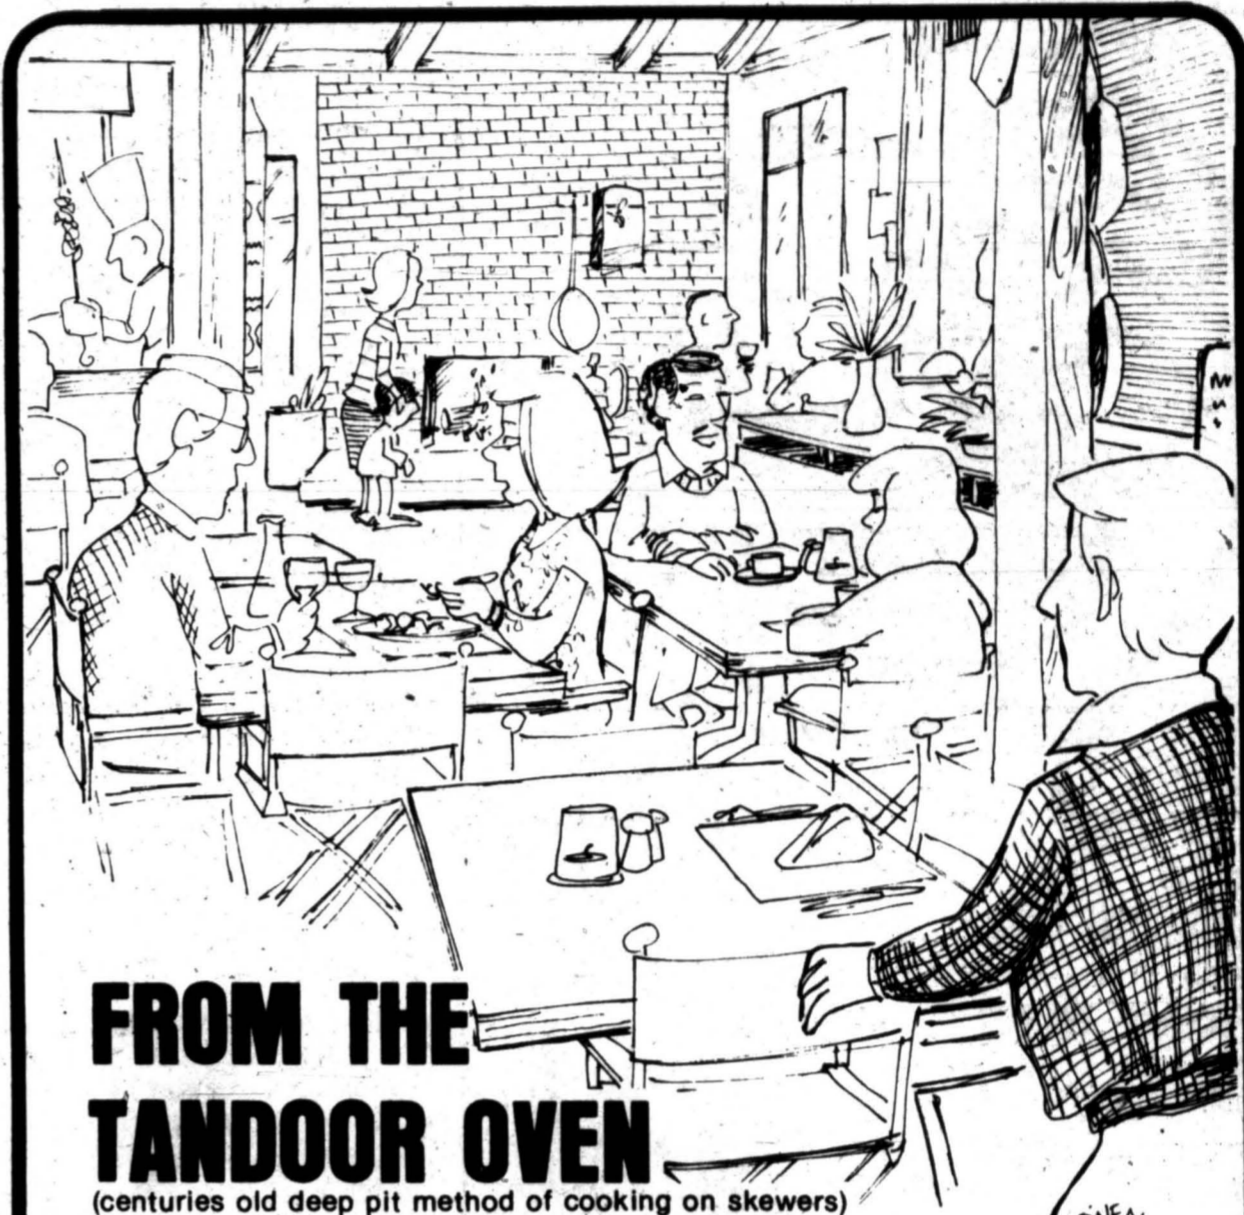

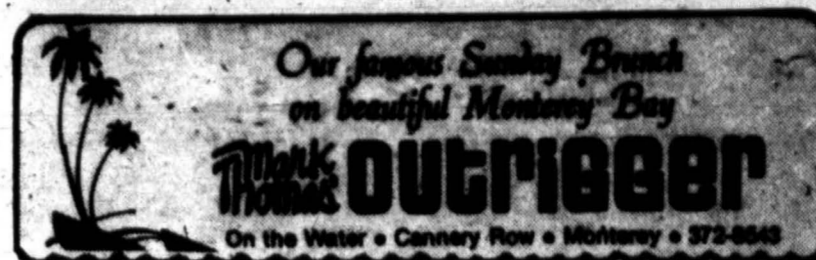

The 11-mile hike along Old Sur Road from Bixby Creek to Molera Park is planned Saturday, Feb. 18. The road undulates, so some elevation is to be expected and beginning hikers should consider the trip strenuous.

Meet behind Brinton's in Carmel Rancho Shopping Center, Highway 1 and Carmel Valley Rd., at 8:30 a.m. Bring stout shoes and the suggested carpool fee of $1.25. For more information, phone leaders Chet and Bev Gadaire, 375-8995.

An easy two-mile tour of some of the walking paths of Garland Ranch is planned Sunday, Feb. 19. The hike is recommended as a good one for beginners and children are welcome. Meet at the Garland Ranch parking lot at 1 p.m. and wear comfortable walking shoes.

For more information, phone leader Bill Denholm, 372-5480.

Theatre:

'Luv' a valentine for the community

By BARBARA MOUNTREY

Skillful direction and polished acting make Luv, now playing at the Barnyard Theatre, a valentine to the community. Unlike some other comedies of the '60s, this one has survived well, because its humor is in fact universal rather than topical. Only the title reminds us of a period when it was fashionable to write "luv," because it seemed much less profound, less of a commitment than "love."

The characters reflect just this shallowness in their commitments. They speak of love as personal salvation, the one thing that will give meaning to their lives, but they are all incapable of giving or receiving it.

Joseph Hanreddy directs the characters as contemporaries, people we all know. There is nothing in their speech or gestures to suggest the age of the play.

Bob Colter, as Harry Berlin, is the central figure of the work. His skill is impressive; his training as a mime and his experience in theater are very evident. The moments when he loses his sight or hearing, and when he becomes completely paralyzed, are impeccably done.

As Milt Manville, Harry's rescuer of a sort, Bob Lester is amusing even while he is somewhat contemptible, a salesman type specializing in cheap merchandise, whose taste in women is apparently as sleazy as the garbage he gathers to resell.

Wendy Goldman, as Ellen Manville, Milt's abandoned wife, is strong and vital. It is hard to believe that either of the men can fail to appreciate her. In fact, at the times when Milt asks her to recite some bit of trivial knowledge on demand, one has the sense that he is indeed proud of her, though he may not know how to cope with her superiority.

They are a complex little group of people, and their interactions are bizarre. But there are some truths about the human condition embedded in all the wit; we laugh, but then we think.

The set, designed by Hanreddy, is dramatic and effective, as is the subdued lighting by Chris Thomason. The costumes, designed by David Obele, are perfect, and the actors use them well. Harry's weird jacket has the exaggerated quality of a tramp-clown's, and he hunches inside it as if it were armor against the hostile world. Ellen's dramatic playing with her coat makes her pain believable when Harry throws it over the bridge.

All these little touches add up to a very tight show, one well worth seeing.

It probably is still worth staying around after the show for the cabaret on Friday and Saturday evenings, although the quality has changed continually, and is still changing. More of the performers are now of an older generation, but some exciting young ones are still there. And, happily, Bruce Tuthill is still the backbone of the show.

Luv plays Thursdays, Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. and Sundays at 2 p.m.

Artist's travelog to be shown at La Playa Feb. 24

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif

Black owns the doubling cube at 2 and it is his roll. Should he double?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

This problem is similar to last week's. Indeed, the Black position is identical. The difference is that this time the White position is not quite as good.

In last week's problem, White was sure to win the game if Black did not bear off both men. Here that is not the case. If Black only succeeds in bearing off one man, White will duplicate that feat if he rolls 1-1, 2-1, 3-1 or 3-2. In other words, White has 29 numbers that will win the game for him, but seven that will lose.

Last week, when White had a certain win if Black did not bear off both men, I suggested that Black should double because he was a slight favorite. Therefore, it would seem that, since Black now has even better odds for winning, the double is an even sounder proposition. Right? Wrong!

The fact is that if Black doesn't redouble now, he might get two chances to win the game! Assume that Black doubles now and fails to bear off one man. White will promptly redouble, and we have seen that he is a better than 4-to-1 favorite to win the game. Since that makes Black a worse than 3-to-1 underdog, he cannot accept the double and must concede the game to White.

If Black keeps possession of the cube and fails to bear off both men, White must roll. Now, if he should roll one of the seven unlucky numbers, Black will win.

Truly, the doubling cube is a mysterious thing!

A refresher on Sunset activities

By RICHARD TYLER
Director, Sunset Community and Cultural Center

THOSE OF US who are involved take for granted the many community activities that fill the calendar at Sunset Center. But it seems that there are residents who are not aware of the many functions that take place at the center. So, I have made a list of the community uses that the center offers.

Monterey Peninsula College, Antioch West College and UC Santa Cruz are three institutions that offer classes regularly at the center.

A list of organizations that meet at the center includes: Alliance Francaise, three Boy Scout troops, the Artists' Forum, Central Coast Art Association, Carmel Sanitary District board, United Nations Organization, legal secretaries group, Community Hospital Nurses' Seminar, Dean Witter and Co., American Institute of Banking, Western Association of Physicians, employees' groups, Community Hospital Management Seminar, Kelley and Co., California Medical Association, and the Women's Democratic Caucus.

Lectures have been given by the Christian Science Church, Science of Soul, Eckankar, Antiques Seminar, Dr. Magee, hypnotist, as well as Navajo weaving and a painting seminar.

The Marjorie Evans Gallery, the Bach Festival, Monterey County Symphony, Friends of Photography, and the Junior League of Monterey have scheduled receptions. We have had wedding receptions and also a memorial service at Sunset.

DUPLICATE BRIDGE PLAY has been conducted each Tuesday for the past seven years. Special activities include the Homecrafters' Marketplace, rabies clinics, City Council meetings, Fire Department drills, police training school, potluck dinners for the Boy Scouts as well as overnight stays for as many as 50 scouts, the Junior League annual tour, tours for the humanities classes at the Carmel High School, and next month the Carmel Police Department will host a course in narcotics for the entire Peninsula for which the Departments of Justice and Narcotics will supply speakers and instructors.

The city of Carmel has presented free civic programs for many years. These include a film series of German opera, the Brown Bag Cinema each third Thursday of the month, the Forest Theater Summer Sunday performances, and such individual productions as presented by the dance groups of Carmel and Seaside High Schools.

The gymnasium offers an opportunity for those who want exercise or game competition. Discussions are going on to enlarge the scheduled program offered in recreation. Certain age groups are not getting the full use of Sunset Center and we are constantly looking for programs and activities to fill their needs.

A SOURDOUGH Rendezvous is scheduled in Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, Canada, through Tuesday, Feb. 28.

Heart fund drive starts

Volunteers for the regional chapter of the American Heart Association will be canvassing Carmel during February, distributing educational information and collecting money. The 1978 heart campaign goal is $140,000.

"The money raised during our February campaign goes to educational and community programs in Carmel, and to research," said Dr. E. John Kennedy, president of the heart association campaign this year. "With costs rising everywhere and the tremendous toll in lives and money cardiovascular diseases take each year, it is absolutely essential that we reach our goal."

Mr. and Mrs. Dale Thoreson, of Carmel, are on the campaign committee for the Central Mission Trails Chapter.

Four civilian employees from Carmel received achievement awards last week from their employer, the Defense Language Institute in Monterey.

Barbara C. Young, of the directorate of evaluation at the institute, received "Outstanding Performance" ratings. Eleven others also received the ratings.

Winning "Outstanding and Quality Step Increase" awards were Mary E. Devine, of the training management division, and Stephen R. Whitney, of the directorate of evaluation.

David de la Vergne, of the resource management office, received a "Sustained Superior Performance" award.

Master jeweler Orlando Feriozzi

His benchwork surpasses words

By JUDITH A. EISNER

ORLANDO FERIOZZI speaks with his eyes and his hands. He smiles and gestures, bending his tall body to suggest a shape, a motion. The actual words — the soft, lilting Italian — that is his native tongue or the halting, hesitant fumbling with not-yet-mastered English — provide a mere accompaniment to his primary form of communication.

He talks of art — art history, the philosophy of art, his personal art, the role of the artist, the student, the teacher — and the very fact that one understands the apprenticeship at 13 with the master goldsmiths in Rome, learning the classical techniques of the 18th-century school. His maestro, Giorgio Cazzaniga, died last year. Speaking with deep emotion, Orlando calls him "very special, sensitive, poetic — a special man, a special artist, a special teacher."

He came to the United States a year and a half ago, fleeing both political and personal pressures in Rome and settled in Carmel where he has presided over the design and manufacture department of Henri Corbat Swiss Jewelers for the past eight months.

DOWN THE DRIVEWAY between Henri Corbat and the Nishi Nursery, through an unmarked door, past strange, hulking pieces of machinery, is the hidden world of Orlando Feriozzi and his apprentices. An atelier in the true sense, this is where the maestro and his students work, learn and produce. Orlando calls it his "laboratorio."

"This profession is finished," Orlando declares. "Everything today is fast, done with casting. With casting, it is not possible to give life to the pieces. These pieces can be looked at inside as well as outside, from the bottom as well as from the top. Like classical sculpture, they have form in all dimensions."

"The customer must understand this. It is my duty to teach them because it is art and it must be explained like painting and

"ORLANDO IS very tough with the apprentices," says his employer, Henri Corbat. "When you're a master, there's only one way. And they're eating out of his

glances and gestures, the Italian and the half-English, proves how much communication is possible on this level.

Orlando is a master jeweler. He began his sculpture.

"Here, we are trying to keep the art alive," he says, gesturing to his three raptly attentive apprentices. "When I die, it is my dream that other people continue."

Orlando and his "boys" (there also is a female jeweler, Kathleen Dughi, the newest student) work entirely by hand, directly in the material, which is usually gold. Orlando will sketch a design and then painstakingly cut it out of a sheet of pure gold. He displays the beginnings of a butterfly, with handcut patterns for each delicate wing.

His apprentices make chains by hand, twisting gold wire into intricate ropes; they build mountings to hold precious stones, learning to fabricate the gold freehand, without a mold.

The master has many works in progress; they evolve gradually. There are no deadlines, no delivery dates. Like Michelangelo and the tomb of Pope Julius II, when it is finished, it is finished.

In addition to the practical work, Orlando teaches from nature and art. He and the apprentices study great paintings and discuss form, color and meaning. They examine great old pieces of jewelry and then turn their attention to nature.

Orlando reaches for a lavishly illustrated book on insects. "This is where design comes from," he says. He takes his boys into the country and to the beach. "Creation comes from nature," Orlando continues. "I am not the creator; I repeat; I copy nature."

In Rome, Orlando taught "hundreds of boys" over the years. He establishes a special rapport with his apprentices, one of whom says, "There is nowhere else in the world to get this classical training, this special atmosphere and relationship with the master."

Another adds: "There is reciprocal need. He is here because we are here. He teaches always, in everything he does."

Orlando says that out of 10 students, maybe one or two are very good. "The other eight at least learn a good way to make jewelry, a systematic way of creating a piece," he says.

The students work at old-fashioned benches, filing and sawing away at pieces of gold over a copper-lined bin. At the end of the day, they glean the gold dust from the bin and return it to a crucible to make more gold.

"The bench is the big boss," Orlando says. "We are slaves of the bench. You can't drink or take drugs and work with a foggy mind. For young people, this is very, very good."

Corbat adds: "Orlando is very tough with the apprentices. When you're a master, there's only one way. And they're eating out of his hand. He attracts just the right people."

Once they have completed their training, the students can be model-makers for large jewelry manufacturers, making models directly in the precious metal, a technique that permits finer detail and more delicate work than wax models offer.

WHEN A CLIENT comes to Orlando, the rare form of communication begins.

"The customer has a dream, an idea about a piece, but doesn't know how to explain," Orlando says. "Dinah Shore didn't speak Italian; I didn't speak any English, but it was possible to communicate with the eyes. It is possible to understand the ideas of the customer without words. I talk with the model of the piece I make. It's my language ... I watch their faces and I understand."

More than half the jewelry Orlando made in his Roman studio came to America, where his clients included Eva Gabor, Dinah Shore, Margaret Truman, Hedy Lamar and important political, business and movie personalities.

Leaving Rome and a lifetime seems almost a relief to him.

"Rome is bad, full of Communists, bad politics, crazy people, crime," he says shaking his head. "I left everything. It was not possible for me to stay in Rome feeling the way I do."

"I hope the American system always stays the way it is now — it offers so much freedom, so many opportunities, such riches. I like America because I've always worked with American people; many people here know me and hold me with affection. I came here with humility, a simple worker."

He looks up and removes his double, magnifying glasses. "Sometimes businessmen are dangerous to art," he muses, "but I think Henri Corbat maybe understands me because he gave me this opportunity."

RAIN GUTTER

"FACTORY ON WHEELS"

Pictured here is our remarkable new machine making continuous rain gutters on a job in Pebble Beach. It's the only machine of its kind on the entire Monterey Peninsula.

This amazing equipment can roll out seamless strips of gutter any length up to 980 feet! No seams mean better appearance, better draining, easier cleaning, no joint leakage.

What's more, the material is long-lasting aluminum which will not rust, with a fine protective coating of bonderized paint (like an enamel, applied under high pressure) both inside and out.

Expensive? Not at all! The cost for this extraordinary rain gutter is comparable to ordinary types of galvanized metal gutters which rust out in very few years.

So give us a call. Our skilled craftsmen will quickly and expertly produce and install this great new gutter right on the job for you. Remember... it's aluminum and will not rust.

Jawing around

VOLUNTEERS FROM the Carmel Fire Department, one by one, are getting "checked out" on the newly acquired Jaws of Life rescue tool. Ray Baumann (left), a volunteer, uses the pry tool to free a car door entry point. Two others (right), John Kirschenbauer and Buzz Cole, use the device to break a hinge on a car door. Perhaps the most dramatic use involves pulling a steering column from a pinned motorist (below). With chains attached to the front bumper and the steering column, the hydraulic might of the Jaws can move the column away in about 30 seconds. The wrecked cars have been furnished by Tony Shade, owner of Peninsula Auto Wreckers in Prunedale.

Theatre in Carmel have given a Pacific Grove couple complete management powers at the 170-seat theater in exchange for an undisclosed investment.

Merle and Jane Strauch, the new managers, were involved with the Memphis Opera before moving to the Monterey Peninsula eight years ago. They have hosted the after-show cabaret entertainment at the Barnyard and are ownership partners in the Hatchcover restaurant in Carmel.

"The Strauchs will provide total management and capital necessary to continue operations which began Sept. 17," said Alan Gilbert, president of the theater. The amount of money involved was not disclosed.

Travis Selmer, also of Pacific Grove, was named general manager by the couple. The job had been held by Kathy Fox, but she resigned in October to accept a job with a theater in Dallas, Tex. Selmer was the general manager of Clewes Hall, the performing arts center in Indianapolis, Ind., for six years. He since has been a consultant to a number of other performing arts groups in the U.S.

Gilbert said the theater has received praise from both the critics and the public, but that it had suffered financial setbacks because of delays in opening. He said the Barnyard Theatre has experienced problems with cash flow.

Topic at foundation is 'Washington as a senior'

"George Washington as a Senior Citizen" is the topic of a talk Wednesday at the Carmel Foundation by Jean Stumbo. An historian, she also teaches the course "First Families" at the foundation.

The talk, part of the Wednesday Program series, begins at 2:30 p.m. in Diment Hall, Eighth and Lincoln.

Admission is free. The public is invited to attend.

Lot eyed for library cars is sold

While the Carmel in-lieu parking fee fund swells, the prospects of enlarging the parking lot at the Harrison Memorial Library severely deflated last week.

A 4,000-square-foot lot with a house, adjacent to the library parking lot on the northwest side of Lincoln and Sixth, was sold in January for $85,000 to a part-time Carmel resident who also owns the adjoining lot. The city had negotiated for both lots for more than one year, but without success. It planned to use the money it collects in in-lieu parking fees.

The announcement of the sale was made by City Administrator Jack Collins at the Feb. 6 City Council meeting. Councilman Bernard Anderson, who also had been active in the negotiations for the lot, said there was a "breakdown in negotiations" between the city and the lot's former owner, Peter Economos.

James Thompson, an attorney from the San Francisco Bay Area and new owner of the lot, could not be reached for comment. In June, however, Thompson vowed the city would have to condemn his land before he would sell it. Now Thompson owns both lots.

"The last thing this village needs is another parking lot," Thompson said in June.

The city is still interested in obtaining both lots, Collins said.

The in-lieu parking fund holds $165,000. The city can use the funds only to purchase parking facilities.

FOLLOWS HER DREAM AND GETS TO WATSONVILLE

Starting out on a "journey" like one that she had read about in a French fairy book, 11-year-old Florence Moller was brought home from Watsonville yesterday to her anxious mother, Mrs. Jany Moller. She disappeared from her home the day before without a word to anyone.

Watsonville police located her in Watsonville yesterday. She was tired and hungry and somewhat disillusioned by her unsuccessful journey to Oakland where she intended to see her uncle.

CARMEL NOT ANXIOUS TO ENCOURAGE FLYING

"Carmel has not yet become air-minded," Norman Miller, local aviator, said today after his return from a tour of inspection of airports of several towns in the San Joaquin Valley.

"It is unbelievable the way airports are springing up all over California in anticipation of the ever increasing inauguration of airlines and the hope that these lines will touch their cities," Miller commented.

IT'S VERY MYSTERIOUS

Charles Wingate, 14-year-old Carmel boy, who wired his mother more than a week ago that he was leaving Watsonville for Hollywood to enter the movies, is home again.

Despite rumors that he was kidnaped and that his mother way paying $60 a day ransom to the alleged abductors, Charles is back safe and sound and still awaiting his call to fame.

WHO MAY ATTEND GOVERNMENT MEETINGS?

Mayor Horace Lyon told the City Council in a public meeting last week that council members should leave the Planning Commission alone, and just so there wouldn't be any obscurity about what he meant, he mentioned specifically that the street commissioner should stay away from Planning Commission meetings.

The street commissioner is Councilman Francis Whitaker and not to be confused with Street Superintendent Bill Askew, who is a city employee.

Mayor Lyon might as well have told a kid to keep away from a cookie jar. Whitaker showed up at the Planning Commission meeting Wednesday afternoon and egged on his side-kick City Councilwoman Gerry Smith to attend, too.

YOUTH CENTER IS UNIQUE

Bonnie and Jack Giles returned from the four-day California Recreation Conference last Friday, happily reinforced in their conviction that the Carmel Youth Center is just about the best of its kind anywhere.

The Gileses discovered, to their surprise and gratification, that the Youth Center here is unique, in that the members run the building and the activities themselves, arrange their own programs, pay for their own equipment, and make and enforce their own rules.

Put these tips and some spare fuses near your fuse box.

With a flashlight, they may help should your lights go out.

Be Prepared. Know where your fuse boxes or circuit breakers are located. Locate the main switch box—usually near the spot where the PG&E electric service wires connect to your house, or near your PG&E electric meter. Locate any additional fuse box or boxes—usually in a closet or utility room. Keep spare fuses handy.

Check the Neighbors. If your lights should go out, check to see if other homes in your neighborhood have lights. If the power is off in your home only, you may have a blown fuse or tripped circuit breaker.

Determine the Cause. Blown fuses or tripped circuit breakers are often caused by having too many lamps or appliances connected to one outlet or circuit. Another possibility is a defective cord on a lamp or appliance. To check, unplug all lamps or appliances on the affected circuit, looking for defective plugs or cords while doing so. Replace the blown fuse or reset the tripped circuit breaker, following the procedures given below. Then plug each lamp or appliance back in one at a time. A defective one or an overload will cause the fuse to blow, or circuit breaker to trip, again.

To Replace a Fuse. First turn the main switch to "OFF." Make sure that your hands are dry and that you are standing on a dry surface. Look for the "blown" fuse; the "window" may be blackened, or there may be a visible gap in the fuse element. Replace the blown fuse with one of the proper amperage rating, usually one of not more than 30 amps. Never use a penny or other metal object to "bridge" the blown fuse, as this could cause a house fire. Turn the main switch to "ON." If only part of the lights in the house come on, this may indicate that a circuit breaker has tripped, or a fuse in a branch fuse box has also blown. Check these fuses in the same way you did at the main switch. Branch box fuses have a maximum rating of 15 or 20 amps.

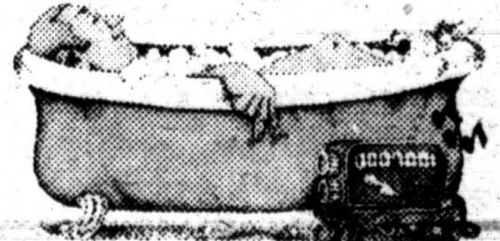

Cartridge Fuses. Be sure the main switch is "OFF" while you are changing cartridge fuses. You won't be able to visually tell exactly which cartridge fuse is blown. In this case, test by safely replacing each fuse with a new one until you find the blown fuse. Generally it's a good idea to replace all cartridge fuses in a circuit when one blows.

To Reset a Circuit Breaker. A tripped circuit breaker will probably be out of the "ON" position. Move the affected circuit breaker handle all the way to the "OFF" position (for some circuit breakers, a moderate pressure in the "OFF" direction is necessary to cause them to reset). Then, move the handle to the "ON" position. If the affected circuit breaker does not indicate that it has tripped (its handle has not moved from "ON" position), and you do not know which circuit breaker controls the affected circuit, try resetting all circuit breakers.

Some Added Safety Tips: Never plug in electrical appliances near bathtubs or basins. Never wash coffee pots or frying pans while they are still plugged in. Make sure that electric tools are properly grounded (with a 3-prong plug), or are of the U.L. approved "double-insulated" type. When you unplug an appliance, pull the plug—not the cord.

Still in the Dark? If you've followed all of these procedures and you're still in the dark, don't hesitate to call PG&E. We'll be happy to help.

Read-a-Thon winners

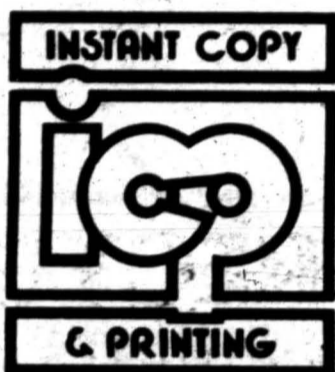

Melody Bender, of Pebble Beach, and Tami Russell and Shaun Allen, both of Carmel, were among the winners in the recent Multiple Sclerosis Read-a-Thon. Students from throughout Monterey, Santa Cruz and San Benito counties raised more than $30,000 by collecting pledges for the number of books they read during a single month.

Some students read more than 150 books in 30 days, according to Barbara Buckingham, of the Monterey Bay Area Chapter.

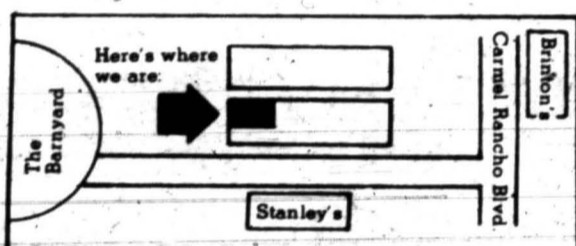

The Read-a-Thon, organized by the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, is designed to stimulate interest in reading books among school children.

But Valley retains affiliation

Carmel cuts Little League tie

The Carmel Little League has cut its ties to Little League Baseball, the youth athletics organization in Williamsport, Pa. Carmel had been affiliated with Little League for 20 years.

Directors of the league voted 13-2 earlier this month to join Youth Baseball Inc. The rules in Youth Baseball are more similar to those in Major League Baseball and a wider age group is eligible to play, said Ken White, outgoing president of the Carmel league.

Carmel Valley Little League will keep its affiliation with Williamsport, said Jim Shakal, president of the Carmel Valley league. Expressing surprise about the news, Shakal said, "I hope we'll still have our Fourth of July picnic together." The decision of the Carmel directors was announced on Friday.

Youngsters 12 and older from Carmel Valley will continue to play in senior leagues sponsored by Carmel Youth Baseball, said Ken Bliesner, president of the Carmel league. Older players from the Valley have been transferred to the Carmel league in the past because it has more playing fields, according to Shakal. For youngsters under 12,

Sign-ups set next week the baseball organization in which they will play is determined by where they live. Those who live west of San Carlos Ranch Road will play in Carmel. Those to the east will play in the Carmel Valley league, Bliesner said. The road is near Carmel Valley Golf and Country Club.

Youth Baseball leagues already have been formed in Monterey, Pacific Grove, Marina and Seaside, he said. White added that the Carmel league directors would like to start a Peninsula-wide Youth Baseball play-off series.

Explaining the change, White said, "The new league structure will allow a more balanced distribution of players and the players will play against opponents of a closer physical and mental age."

"The Youth Baseball rules are more aligned with competitive baseball rules and the diamond size is more compatible with the physical size and age of the players," he said.

Under the Youth Baseball rules, boys and girls aged 7 to 16 are eligible to play. In Little Leagues, the accepted age group is 8 to 15.

There will be five leagues and 23 teams in the Carmel Youth Baseball organization, White said. They are Pinto League (tee league) for ages 7 and 8; Mustang League, 9 and 10; Bronco League, 11 and 12; Pony League, 13 and 14; and Colt League, 15 and 16.

In Carmel Valley, there will be six teams for youngsters aged 8 to 12, Shakal said.

Sign-ups for the Carmel Valley Little League are scheduled next Wednesday from 7 to 8 p.m. at Carmelo School and on Wednesday, March 1, also from 7 to 8 p.m. at Tularcitos School.

In Carmel, league sign-ups will be conducted next Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. at Carmel Middle School on Carmel Valley Road. There is a $10 donation asked for the first player in a family and $5 for each additional family member who enrolls. Both girls and boys may play, White said.

Salmon season opens Saturday

Prospects for this season's ocean salmon fishing have been rated only fair, according to State Department of Fish and Game predictions.

The season opens Saturday south of Tomales Bay, with the opening day effort concentrating off the Golden Gate Bridge.

Ocean sport landing estimates for 1977, while not final, approach 116,000. The 1977 effort was the poorest landing since 1966.

King salmon catches, however, rose in number from 81,000 fish landed in 1976 to 104,000 fish in the 1977 season.

RLS trounced 91-65 in Padre point spree

By JAY POSNER

LED BY Tom Frincke and Dave Stevenson, the Carmel High Padres won their 10th game in a row and the 18th out of their last 17 by clobbering Robert Louis Stevenson 91-65 Friday night at Pebble Beach. Carmel also defeated Palma 64-57 Tuesday, Feb. 7, in the Padre gym. The Padres' season record is now 18-3.

Frincke and Stevenson, who scored 38 and 36 points, respectively, paced the Padres to their 23rd and 24th straight MTAL game victories.

Against RLS, the Padres dominated the game at the start and never let up. The 91-point total was the highest point production by Carmel this year. The previous high was 70, set on Dec. 15 against Westmont High of San Jose in the first round of the Carmel Invitational Tournament.

The Pirates were never in the game as the Padres opened up an 18-8 first-quarter lead and a 43-29 halftime advantage. In the first half, Carmel's full-court press forced 13 RLS turnovers. Many of those were converted into layups or easy jumpshots. The Padres also out-rebounded the Pirates 22-11 in the half. Dave Stevenson scored 11 of his game-high 21 points in the first half and Tom Frincke scored nine of his total 17 points in the first 19 points, they fought back to edge the first-place Pirates. Kevin Glenn led RLS with 25 points.

AGAINST Palma, the Padres opened up an early lead, but saw Palma come back to take a 38-37 lead with 2:53 left in the third quarter.

Carmel led 11-6 late in the first quarter, but Palma came back to close the gap to 15-14 at the end of the first quarter. The Padres then built up a 34-25 lead with about a minute left in the half, but the Chieftains took advantage of a Carmel turnover to score late in the half and trail by only seven, 34-27, at the half.

The Chieftains continued their comeback in the third quarter and that rally culminated in the Chieftains' only lead of the night, 38-37.

However, John Frincke put Carmel back in the lead 39-38, by hitting a 15-foot jumper. Seconds later, brother Tom made it 41-38, as he took a pass from John and pumped in a five-footer. Next it was Dave Stevenson's turn as he took a pass from Frank Lucido and dropped in a 12-foot jump shot to give the Padres with 21 points and Dave Stevenson added 15 and also had a team-high nine rebounds. John Frincke scored 10 points and pulled down eight rebounds.

The Padres hit 26 of 46 shots from the field, a fantastic 56.5 percentage. The Chieftains were not far behind as they hit 25 of 46, a superb 54.3 percentage. The game was won at the freethrow line where Carmel was 12 of 21 and Palma was 7 of 11. Another big factor was that Carmel out-rebounded Palma 29-17.

Palma won the junior varsity game 46-41 as they outscored the Padres 11-6 in the final period. Adam Sherburne scored 13 to pace Carmel.

The Padres won the freshman game 34-25 by outscoring Palma 18-5 in the second half. Matt Nottenkamper scored 12 and Greg Raynes added 10 to lead the Padres to the victory.

Carmel hosted Pacific Grove Tuesday night in a game that decided the MTAL championship, barring an upset in the last two games. The Padres travel to King City tomorrow and then close out the regular season Tuesday night at home against Hollister. The varsity game is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

OFFER TO OUR VALUED SUBSCRIBERS

The Pine Cone is now under new ownership and new management. We are happy to be here and look forward to meeting our subscribers. Meanwhile, as a gesture of our thanks for your continued support, we invite you to have a free want ad, every week, in your paper.

HOW TO WRITE A WANT AD

List the classification you want your ad to appear under in the form at right. Then start your ad with the item you have for sale, etc. Be sure to include your phone number at the end. To make your ad effective, describe your item fully including such things as weight, size, color, age, condition, etc. It is best to list your asking price; this will eliminate calls from people who are not prospective buyers.

RULES:

Free want ads are for person-to-person sales only. Ads for businesses or real estate will not be accepted. Free ads must be written on this form only and delivered to our office by noon Tuesday (no phone ads, please). Free ads are limited to 20 words.
